

The Mudd Club

© Morgan Roberts

Delinquent garage rockers with a penchant for all things loud and fuzzy and a drive to provide what they feel the world needs more of nowadays - pure rock n roll in its most primitive and scuzzy glory.

Originally from the distant and ever-exotic land of Lawrence, Kansas, the Mudd Club now find themselves based between Bristol and Machynlleth, Wales.

The band lineup features Sadie Morningstar who is responsible for dishing out gritty sass-filled vocals and searing guitar licks so hot and trashy it'll rip ya to shreds.

Julian West thunders away and bashes out the most primitive and energetic beats to ever grace your ears (or deafen them at least,) while Joe Trudgeon propels the whole lot along with impressive yet solid bass lines, while looking like he's just time traveled from the 1930s. (Yes, he's in the band. No, he's not a lost jazzer who accidentally ended up at a punk show.)

The Mudd Club are always ready and willing to rock n roll all night with their trashily glamorous action-filled sludge of sonic voodoo and hope to see ya at some gigs later in the year!

'The Mudd Club are the past, present and future of garage rock'n'roll kept simple. It's an enclosed fantasy world of Happy Days style 50's retro with a punk-rock sneer and a wink. Knowing and thrilling, the Mudd Club are escapism as a political act.' - Ged Babey, Louder Than War